O'REILLY READY FAUST' PLEASES FOR FRENCH BALL

He Will Have Fifty Coppers There with a Hose in Case Sparks Fly.

"OOLONG ROOGE" HE KNOWS. MME. EAMES UNABLE TO SING

Three Hundred Girls Are Billed for a Dance, and Rose Battle Is Promised, Though They Are $1.50 a Dozen.

Despite Capt. O'Reilly, despite Acting Inspector Richard Walsh, despite Commissioner Greene, despite William Trayers Jerome, in fact, despite the very inblue letter of the law, the French Ball billed for the Garden Monday night dses to be real warm.

This is the thirty-eighth annual. In the early days it was a frost, but since, ach year has added a little caloric to it, so that in the past two years there has been a little sizzling and scorching. Inspector Thompson, it is said, attended one of two French Balls. They say he wore a dinky little cap. It was even rumored that by some peculiar magnet-ism he attracted all those who sought for trouble, with bulging eyes, in one involved mass of gyrating arms and legs which he furnished the centripetal energy.

O'Reilly and the Ball.

Capt. O'Reilly, basking in the glow of his thirteen horse-power illuminated halo, was told about the ball.

"You don't mean it?" he said. "You say it is going to be a French ball? Now, that reminds me, I once read in a cer-tain pink paper about the Oolong Rooge. I didn't show the paper to my wife, but I thought a lot about it. There were detures. Say, I thought a lot about those pictures; but then that was Paris Here we are different.

"You say that champagne flows like ter midnight the sparks begin to fly? Well, now, I'il have to look into this and if any sparks fly I'll have fifty men there with a hose, if necessary, to pre-vent any conflagration."

A Battle of Roses.

A Battle of Roses.

The Cercle Francais de l'Harmonie, however, as their press agents have announced each year, are going to try and make the 1968 ball the real thing. Three hundred young women, it is said, selected by a committee of Freuchmen for their grace and beauty, have been selected to perform a few new dancesnot early in the evening. It is said that they will all masquerade as insects, the masquerade going as far as the filmy gauze, but not as far as six or eight legs apiece. The management says that nature's alloted two should satisfy even those who have to resort to a triple lens from the top tier of boxes.

to a triple lens from the top tier of boxes.

Some time during the evening there is going to be a floral fete and carnival involving a battle of roses. The three hundred young women will have the roses and every real sport that is struck by one must, by the rules of the game, buy at least a bottle of ginger ale—if he can. It is not on the wine list.

There will be a parade of handsomely decorated floats. There will be wheelbarrows. The advance notices do not explain the exact function of the wheelbarrows, but it is supposed that they will be used on the floor as handler than ambulances.

There will be no flags in the decorations this year. The entire roof of the Garden will be covered with bunting of white and deep red in wide alternate stripes, which will be extended down the sides of the building covering the area seats.

Penal Code Free for All.

Two circles of pedestals supporting vases of chrysanthemums connected by an arch of tricolor streamers will form a promenade around the dancing floor. These arches will also be draped with garlands of flowers and evergreen vines.

In recognition of the strenuous police sination of the year the management has provided an ample reading-room, which is stocked with the latest editions of the Penal Code. Upon entering the building guests will please form in line and pause in the reading-room for a few minutes to consult the criminal statutes before engaging in the rout. Capt. O'Reilly's men will wear vests made of pages torn from the Penal Code, and it is expected that as the evening lengthens the dull moments will be relieved by stereopticon views of fac-similes of the blue laws of colonial days. Mr. Jerome has not accepted, according to late reports.

Appearing without rehearsal, Mme. Seygard evinced a satisfying familiarity with the role and sang much better than was anticipated, though she does not reach the vocal standard of the Mar guerites to which Metropolitan patrons have grown accustomed. But she saved a changed bill, and every one was tnankful for that.

Alvarez is not temperamentally suited to the rejuvenated Dr. Faustus, but with his pleasing tones and finished vocal method the big Spanish tenor could hardly fall to give impressive rendition to the exquisite music allotted him. His efforts at repression were commendable, even if he did take to top C in the "Salve Dimorah" as a headstone after the tradition of the Paris opera. His accuracy of intonation was an agreeable surprise and so satisfying his work throughout the evening that we can afford to speak forgivingly of his insistence in singing across the footlights.

Scotil was an admirable Valentine, though he appeared to be forcing his tone. Edouard de Resske's Mephisto was acted in his old spirit of unctuous diabelerie and sung with reminiscent strains of his old-time wealth of tone, but at times he lapsed into careless phrasing. The "Golden Calf" was given with all his old fire, but the familiar seremade was hardly up to the old De Resske standard. Miss Briddwell was a color-ress Slebel, and Miss Bauermeister folicked quaintly through the role of Martha.

The chorus was on its very hest behavior and helped to round out a spirited performance, which was further, enhanced by new settings and the capable stage direction of Mr. Almanz.

The allusion to Actor Williard's previous matrimonial alliance adds a new interest to his latest romance on account of its similarity. In 1897 Belle Alken, niece of Congressman Stevenson, of Menominee, Mich., startled society by her hasty marriage to "Joe" Williard. Shortly after the bride was kidnapped by relatives, says Mr. Williard, from the Chicago Hotel, at which she and her husband were stopping. The young bride was taken to a California convent and, according to her husband, a divorce was afterward secured by Williard's divorced wife was married to the man to whom she was engaged at the time of her marriage with the actor.

"It cost my first wife's relatives over $30,000 to get her away from me," said Williards. The actor, who is a heavy set, athletic young fellow, says he is confident no trouble will ever be made by the Toones, as the overtures of peace have already been made.
